Rebekah Fair

Held Wednesday and Thursday by Mt. Hope Lodge—Attractive Sale, Supper and Entertainment

The annual fair, supper and entertainment of Mt. Hope Rebekah Lodge of Norway started Wednesday afternoon in the Odd Fellows Lodge room and dining hall. Business was brisk at the booths during the afternoon. Entering the hall on the left was the mystery booth, where packages severely wrapped attracted the curiosity of many patrons. Miss Rosamund Dunham was in charge of the booth, which comprised Mrs. Lulu Swan, Mrs. Gladys Rich, Mrs. Etta Lebroke, Mrs. Clara Ames, Miss Jessie Everett and Mrs. Annie Sessions. Across the way on the right was the candy department, where homemade sweets in sugar and peanut fudge, walnut creams, peanut brittle and other kinds, attracted many sales. This was Mrs. Caroline Fisher's table and a large committee assisted.

The place of the mystery was the variety table featuring novelty articles and general wares. Mrs. Grace Bennett had charge there with the help of Mrs. Mary Cole and Miss Ellie Swan. As usual the fancy table was the mecca for the thrifty and forhaunted in stocking for Christmas gifts. There were many useful articles mixed with those intended purely for decoration and taste. Mrs. Clara Dunn was the chairman and her assistants were Mrs. Alice E. McIntire, Mrs. Alice Smith, Mrs. Nellie Smith, Mrs. Nettie Nevers, Mrs. Grace Cushman, Mrs. Bessie Hutchins, Mrs. Marion Jellerson and Mrs. Lizzie Brooks.

Down the line was the apron table loaded for a time with an attractive stock suitable for every need. Good business depleted the collection of articles from the dainty kind to the more substantial ones made for hard wear. Mrs. Gertrude Libby was chairman of the committee, including Katherine Bennett, Margaret Bachelder, Ada Cox, Ethel Coulton, Lizzie Downing, Cornelia Fina, Bertha Wentzel, Ella Perry, May Fride, Elizabeth Swett, Hattie Wiley, Hester Thomas. A handsome patchwork quilt in a sale of lead pencils was under the care of Mrs. Alice E. McIntire, who picked it up on the roadside and returned it to him. Mrs. Herbert F. Andrews is spending the week in Peabody, Mass., the guest of her son, Glenn Andrews, and family, and with Mrs. and Mrs. Eugene E. Andrews in Waterville.

The pumper crew was called again Wednesday to lower the water in a miniature lake between Winter and Green Streets. A culvert between the residences of Henry B. Foster and Fred S. Brown, on Main Street, Rain and melting snow caused this bother and expense. Bertrand G. McNamee left Tuesday morning for Syracuse, N. KIWANIS NEWS

The "Kiwianqueens" received an "ultimatum" this week like this: "You are hereby commanded to take the body of your husband, if he may be found within your precinct, and keep him in the 'Kiwian Ladies' Night' to be held at the I. O. O. F. Hall, South Paris, March 27, at seven o'clock. Fail and you will be fined $10.00 and costs $7.75. Your goods and chattels have been attached in the sum of $15.00 for your joint appearance."

"Frankly, the future of our 'Ladies' Night' is an open question. The reason for our ladies, because in the past, for years unknown to the officers of the club, was an opportunity for you to make a contribution to Kiwanis by your efforts in making this meeting a success, and if it is a success more 'Ladies' Nights' will follow. You may have the reason for our ladies, because in the past, for years unknown to the officers of the club, was an opportunity for you to make a contribution to Kiwanis by your efforts in making this meeting a success, and if it is a success more 'Ladies' Nights' will follow. Can't Get Maine Apples

Fruit from this State is Missing in the Boston Retail Stores

By D. Cromett Clark of Somerville, Mass.

On Saturday last, I bought some Arkansas Black apples, grown in Oklahoma, for eating and cooking at home. That variety is gaining rapidly each year as a retail favorite in the stores of Boston and suburbs in March and April, and even into May. It is sold here in two sizes, one about 2 1/2 inches long by 2 3/4 inches wide, and the other smaller. It comes in a very deep red, the skin is smooth, the texture is firm, somewhat like that of a Northern Spy apple, it cooks nicely, and the flavor is mild and pleasant, about that of the Monmouth apples grown in Maine. The blossom end is narrow and only very slightly indented.

Most of the apples seen in Boston at present are the Stayman or Winesap, two varieties not easily told apart. I saw a few light yellow russets today, a russet different from what I knew as a russet in the past, and very agreeable eating, but not cooking, and also today I discovered a few McIntosh apples. The Stayman and Winesap, mostly from Oregon and West Virginia, lead the local market now, as just told, with the Arkansas Black variety to be leading in a few weeks, and the others occasionally found. The McIntosh, a Western apple, is here in small quantities.

I inquired for Maine apples, and the Boston fruit men tell me that they cannot get them. This statement generally applies to wholesalers as well as retailers, and it is certainly correct for the retail.

Maine, a natural apple-raising region, is losing out in marketing its apples in Boston, the nearest big market. I think that it is safe to say that from October to April, the greater Boston market consumes more than a million apples a day, which at a count of 125 apples per box, seven months (214 days) equals one million, seven hundred and twelve thousand boxes of apples in the season.

That is a worth-while market and it is the most of its apples west of the Mississippi River. Roughly thousands of boxes come from down south.

The particular thing that I wish to suggest at this time is not a repetition of the statement that Maine apples could be sold in Boston all right if offered in large enough lots—ten thousand bushels to one hundred thousand bushels—but that the old Black Oxford apple, also called Black apple—could be made a good seller in the closing weeks of the season, from about March 21 until some time in May. When I was a boy in Buckfield, forty to fifty years ago the Black apple was a favorite for home use in the latter part of the season. Nobody had cold storage, but most farmers had good eating apples in the cellar until some time in June, for the Black apples were slow to ripen off in storage and were not desirable for eating until most other apples were gone.

The Black apple is small, but here and there a tree was found which yielded nearly as large as many Baldwins and somewhat larger than the average Fameuse (or Snow) apples. Those larger Black apples must have come from trees having superior soil conditions. With modern fertilizing and care of the trees, might not the fruit usually be larger? The Black apple is a beautiful bearer, which is another reason why it ought to be a profitable orchard fruit.

The situation is that here in Greater Boston, we are hungry for apples and cannot get them from such a good and such a near-at-hand producing region as Maine. And such a desirable late spring cooking apple as the Black apple, we cannot get at all.

Does it look like an opportunity?

HONORED FARM AND HOME WEEK

Among the six outstanding farmers honored at the Farm and Home Week at the University of Maine this week was Leslie E. McIntire. The account says, "Leslie E. McIntire, East Waterford, one of the foremost dairymen of the state, says, 'It takes a heap of work in a lifetime to make life worth living.' At the present time he is in partnership with his son, Clayton, own 60 head of registered Holstein cattle said to be the first to be accredited in Maine. His farm annually produces approximately 60 acres of hay, two acres of potatoes, 12-15 of sweet corn and 10 of barley."

"Shrubbery and shade trees are found around his buildings. His buildings are equipped with running water, electric lights and power from two home plants. The home is attractive and comfortable. It has furnace heat, bathroom, telephone, washing machine and radio. The following indicates his activity in public affairs: Selection for many years; President of the County Agricultural Society; officer in the Council Meeting of his church; Master Pomona Grange; Member Executive Committee State Grange, eight years; Director N. E. M. P. A. and Holstein Friesian Association; County Farm Bureau Project leader for 10 years (also many other positions)."

Statistical Story of United States Highways

A statistical story of the growth of highway systems in the United States and in the world is resided in Highways Handbook, recently illustrated publication by the Highway Education Board.

"The building of the modern highway system," says the chairman of the Board, in a brief introduction, "has no counterpart in the public works of any nation.

"The construction of the Panama Canal was a task of large magnitude; its completion a great national achievement; yet large as it was the contribution of the Federal Government alone to the construction of highways far outmeasures it, and the part of the Federal Government in the program of road improvement has been relatively small. The greater part of the work has been done by the States and their subdivisions.

"The story of this great constructive work wants no elaboration. The bare figures of miles built and money invested are impressive beyond needs of added emphasis; and it is such an unembroidered story that is told by the facts and figures presented in this booklet."

One chapter is devoted to a general summary, an itemization of interesting features in connection with the subject. What is the longest paved road in the world; what state has the largest highway mileage; what is the shortest road and the most narrow street; what is the proportion of United States highways to the rest of the world? These and a hundred other pertinent questions are answered in the section on "milestones".

For the student, the book is a treasure trove. Tables giving total road mileage, road income, and expenditure, and other related data, by years, by types, by states and by counties appear frequently in the booklet. The total road expenditure for 1928, for instance, was $1,428,370,270, which is broken up into various subdivisions covering construction, maintenance, administration, purchase of equipment and bond interest.

Of the total 1928 highway income of $1,566,946,170, 20 percent was derived from motor vehicle fees, 18 per cent. from gasoline taxes, five per cent. from Federal Aid, 17 per cent. from bonds, 27 per cent. from general taxes, and 13 per cent. from miscellaneous funds. General taxes fall two per cent. short of covering the cost of maintenance alone.

In the table on total mileage and total mileage surfaced, it is disclosed that of the 2,016,281 miles of rural roads in the United States, 69 per cent. is under the supervision of local authorities, or those other than state and Federal officials.

AS NEAR AS THE TELEPHONE

Our service is always as near as the nearest telephone. Calls from outside towns receive the same prompt and careful attention as those from close at hand. Our complete modern motor equipment shortens the distance.

We make this announcement for the information of those who might desire the complete service that we are prepared to give, but hesitate to call us because they are not located in this town.

Our service knows no boundaries. Even in distant cities we have connections with leading funeral directors and can arrange for the same service that we give in this town.

Birch Wood Manufacturing

Maine has been called the "Pine Tree State" but the amount of small articles manufactured from the several types of birch cut within the state borders is interesting.

These very small articles, manufactured by many wood working plants include Bobbins, Camera Film Rolls, Checkers, Clothespins, Cork Caps, Cork Tops, Dowels, Pail Handles, Parcel Handles, Tool Handles, Wash Boiler Handles, Peg Wood, Shoe Heels, Shoe Pegs, Skewers, Spools and Toothpicks.

A cord of sound birch will yield about 9,000,000 toothpicks.

The plan of saving a small amount regularly will prove to you the value of making a habit of looking after the small amounts of cash.

Tamarack Talk

A sculptor, a carver in stone bent intently upon his work, his fingers busy on a modern building under construction. His face was white from the dust of granite and his eyes squinted through a pair of tiny glasses, while he wrought works in stone that will long outlive his span of life and that in their beauty will live forever. His clothes were worn and an old hemlock sweater worn and a long stone-cutting apron clung to him as though it were a part of the life of the stone-cutter. And of the life of the stone-cutter, he appeared so at ease, so casual and so untroubled about everything except his work and his thoughts on philosophy.

This same stone-cutter frequented a "hot-dog" lunch wagon that graces the street directly opposite the latest work of modern architecture in the city. And it was there that I made his acquaintance, for I, too, had to order sustenance, and often in short order. I got used to his shabby appearance, his friendly smile, his accent (he had studied for years in Germany), and his somewhat verbose, yet explicit expressions of philosophy and science. When I could I would sit and listen to him talk, much longer and longer, but he would not let me, for the lesser lights in the lunch cart, of course.

One day I got the surprise of my life. Rushing into the eating place I was astonished to see my stone-cutter friend, dressed as a gentleman of means, and indeed he presented a striking picture with his white beard and piercing eyes, nearly surrounded by all the refinements of Brooks or Lord and Taylor.

But alas! He was not himself. And I wondered if he had come to New York as much as he loved to get up on the scaffolding and carve a work of art in stone, even long after other workmen dropped their tools, till night had stopped him with its curtain of darkness. He hated New York and the jostling people there. And he related some of his experiences with more than usual volubility.

Not many days later, while I was still thinking of my sculptor, I came upon a poem, in the magazine, "Poetry Quarterly", that exactly portrayed my stone-cutter and expressed precisely the same thoughts that were presented to me in the place for us.

The poem, written by William Sauer and printed in the First Number of "Poetry Quarterly":

The Stone Cutter
He was a sculptor and he understood the tones
He knew good tools and understood the tones
His chisel made in certain crevices.
Sometimes he worked all day upon his knees
So he could shape the better, a classic foot
Or leg. They said that he had rather put
On his leather apron and breeches tucked
Than work in slacks. Nothing ever made
With him his white dress as years pressed down.

Then his towel head and the sound
Of his sharp chisel weakened every day.
So travelers tell who have seen the stone-cutter
One day his hammer never sounded alone
And to this day his hammer never sounded alone.
You see, poetry is everywhere only we do not recognize it until so expressed by one who feels sufficiently to put the words in place for us.

To write poetry one must actually
"feel" and experience things. Thereupon follows the thinking and the poem.
In that sense, the poem is a "Poetry Quarterly" (which by the way is one of the best of the new magazines lately born to stimulate interest in poetry.)

"The Poet" by Laurence Stallard, and it shows the keenness that must be the nature of the poet.

The Poet
With senses all alive
He thrills at the music of the world
He thrills at the music of the world
The blend of long, long silences
With clear, clear, clear, clear, clear
Heard only by those hearts with roots
Deep in the ground. —Tam.

Household Clearance

Many a prudent housewife has found it profitable to call upon the Advertiser Want Ads to effect a household clearance sale.

In many homes there are stored away disused articles of household equipment, sewing machines, baby carriages, articles of furniture and even personal apparel and other individual things—all of which may be quickly turned into ready cash.

By taking advantage of the Intelligence Column Ads, a market may be developed for all used articles that may have any intrinsic value.

A household clearance sale, conducted through Advertiser Want Ads, has been the means of ridding many a household of discarded articles.

Advertisements placed in this paper will bring buyer and seller together. Use them—the cost is small.

INTELLIGENCE COLUMN RATES: 25 words or less one week, 25c; second week, 15c; and 10c each week thereafter. Each word more than 25, one cent per word each week.

MEN'S SUPPER, UNIVERSALIST CHURCH

The men of the Universalist Church and Parish served supper and furnished an entertainment in the vestry, Wednesday evening. Baked beans, cold meats, salads, rolls, cream pie, etc., was the supper menu that drew a large patronage. The committee included Herbert Morin, Frank H. Beck and Charles F. Morse; their assistants were William A. Bicknell, George F. Hill, Stanley P. True, Leroy Spiller, Clarence H. Downing, W. Marford Mann, Dave A. Kuhn, Glenn R. McIntire and James N. Farrow. B. G. McIntire sold tickets at the door.

After the tables were cleared away a program in charge of Clayton Murch was given. This included three vaudeville skits that brought down the house and demanded encores.

The numbers were Phyllis A. Allen and Dwight Kilgore in an Irish and Hebrew sketch of breezy comedy; Glenn McIntire and Mrs. Walter White brought out a bunch of matrimonial troubles; Clayton Murch and Miss Lucy Cobb appeared in a short farce brimming over with comedy lines.

Victor Partridge entertained with readings.

The music was furnished by Howard Shaw and Helen Emery.
